WAR.

The following beautiful extract is from the pen of Dr. Chalmers. who has written with such force and energy in detence of the Christian Religion. It presents in so strong a light, the ferocious aspect of war, when undisguised by the faise spiendors wnich surround it, that nothing ought to be read with greater or light by a people, whose duty, interest and desire it is, to encourage and adopt a pacific policy towards other nations.

"One great obstacle to the extinction of war, is the way in which the heart of man is carried off from its barbarities and its horrors, by the splendor of its deceitful atcompaniments. There is a feeling of the sublime in contemplating the shock of armies, just as there is in contemplating the devouring energy or a tempest; and this so elevates and engrosses the whole man, that his eye is blind to the tears of bereaved parents, and his ear is deaf to the piteous moan of the dying, and the shrick of their desolated families. There is a gracefulness in the picture of a youthful warrior burning for distinction in the field, and lured by this generous aspiration to the deepest of the animated throng, where, in the fell work of death, the opposing sons of valor struggle for a remembrance and a name; and this side of the picture is so much the exclusive object of our regard, as to disguise from our view, the mangled carcasses of the fallen, and the writhing agonies of the hundreds, and the hundreds more, who have been laid on the cold ground, where they are left to languish and to die. There no eyes pity them! No sister is there to weep over them! There no gentle hand is present to ease the dying posture, or bind up the wounds. which in the maddening fury of the combat, have been given and received by the children of one common father! There death spreads its pale ensigns over every countenance, and when night comes on, and darkness around them, how many a despairing wretch must take up with the bloody field as the untended bed of his last sufferings, without one friend to bear the message of terderness to his distant home, without one companion to close his eyes! I avow it-On every side of me,

I see causes at work which go to spread a most delus ve coloring over war, and to remove its shocking barbarities to the back ground of our contemplations altogether. I see in the history, which tells me of the superb appearance of the troops and the brilliancy of their successsive charges-I see it in the poetry which lends the magic of its numbers to the narrative of blood, and transports its many admirers, as by its images and its figures, and its nodding plumes of chivarry, it throws it's treacherous embellishments over a scene of legalized slaughter. I see it in the music which represents the progress of the battle, and where, after being inspired by the trumpet notes of preparation, the whole beauty and tenderness of a drawing room, are seen to bend over the sentimental entertainment; nor do I hear the utterance of a single sigh to interrupt the death-tones of the thickening contest and the moans of the wounded men, as they fade away apon the ear, and sink into lifeless silence!-all, all goes to prove what strange and half-sighted creatures we are. Were it not so, war would never have been seen in any other aspect than that of unmingled hatefulness, and I can look to nothing but to the progress of christian sen-timent upon earth, to arrest the strong chrrent of its popular and prevailing partiality for war. Then only will an imperious sense of duty, lay the check of severe principle, on all the subordinate tustes and faculties of our nature. Then will glory be reduced to its right estimate-and the wakeful benevolence of the gospel chasing away every speil, will be turned by the treachery of no delusion whatever rom its simple but sublime enterprizes, for the good of the species. Then the reign of truth and quietness will be ushered into the world; and war, cruel, atrocious, unrelenting war, will be stript of its many and its bewildering fascinations,"
